

NOTE

This typewritten copy of "Connecticut Paper Currency, 1709-1793" by William West Bradbeer, author of "Confederate and Southern State Currency," Mt. Vernon, New York, 1915, was made from the original manuscript loaned to me personally for this purpose, lest anything possibly happen to the original manuscript before the same might be published.

At the same time a typewritten copy was made of Mr. Bradbeer's manuscript relating to "Colonial and Continental Paper Money", for the same reason.

*Mr. Godard states
he made 2 copies
of this manuscript.
I have the carbon copy or #3*

Eric:

I wish I could find Laban
Heath like this book I located on Fathers Day.

You refer to this book on page
85 in your "Early Paper Money of America."

The book I have is beautifully bound in blue and was a part of George Godard's library.

There are 3 copies, William Bradbeers, whereabouts, unknown to me. Mr. Godard in the Connecticut Library ^{which} I would assume would be bound like mine.

I suspect you may have a photocopy, if you do not, I'll send one along to you.

Hi Eric:

Looking into church records aspect, quite interesting.

It appears that the Heath family went to church in Dunbarton - still investigating.

I took a picture of the Heath family cemetery, most of the markers are damaged, Boy Scouts have cleaned up the cemetery - neat & clean.

"The Gift", Saturday Evening Post,

For now I'm looking into ^{Town} history Dunbarton. The church the Heaths attended was built on John & Molly Stark property many years ago.

I'll keep you posted as I should have some answers soon.

Hope everything is well with you and your family

Best Regards
Bob Wester
